The fowl has only one leg.

§ The servants of great men have a great contempt for the gullibility of their masters whom they cheat and plunder. The story goes that a great man had once a roast fowl with only one leg set before him, his cook protesting that the fowl belonged to a breed that had but one leg, and, the next day, he drew his master's attention to a fowl standing on a dunghill on one leg, saying 'there's another'. But the master cried out 'hush,' and the fowl flew away, displaying both legs. 'Well' said the servant, 'if you had said hush to the other fowl he would have shown another leg likewise.'

Your head now shakes, your hair is white, pale-faced, your eyelids droop,

Your ears are deaf, your eyes are dim, your body hath a stoop,

Sound sleep and spirits fled, your hunger's less,

What was to be has happened now, your march must soon begin,

Shrunk is your frame, your back is bowed, your horse now saddle, friend!

The drum of death hath beaten been, of march-

ن nān, The 25th letter of the Arabic and 29th of the Persian alphabet, corresponds to ن in Sanskrit. It is one of the dental letters, and has the sound of the English n, with the following exceptions.

1 When it is quiescent in the middle or end of a word, and follows a nadda or simple long vowel it has a very slight nasal sound, as, in zabān bad, zamān time, zamān earth, chānd moon This is called nūn-i-ḡaynā If, however, the word at the end of which it occurs be so placed in composition that the nūn becomes movable by zāfat it ceases to be nasal and resumes its original sound as a dental letter 2 When it precedes و or پ it has the sound of m as in mimbar a pulpit, sampat riches

3 Before ک or گ it assumes a nasal sound similar to that which the English n has before the corresponding letters in the words 'song, sunk,' as in angūshṭan to suppose, Lankā, angārā. According to ahjad, q v it stands for 50 In almanacs it signifies the conjunct aspect of the stars In Persian it is also an adverb of negation, either prefixed to another word or used separately In Sanskrit, न is a separate negative particle.
